What is MyFILE?

Keeping records is an essential part of life. MyFILE is a compact, portable organizer for personal records. This tool can assist in a variety of ways—organization of important records, accessing services, and learning the value of keeping important documents. MyFILE is designed for having current information available as youth/individuals go to appointments, apply for a job, keep track of medications and many additional activities.

The MyFILE is in a messenger bag for several reasons:

- Important records need to be protected and securely fastened.
- Assists in accessibility and ease of transfer. It can be carried across the body so hands are free, strapped to a wheelchair or walker, or carried as a briefcase.
- Having information in one place is time-saving, reassuring and builds independence.

An important note about confidential information: Protecting confidential information and records is a very important skill for young adults to develop. Parents and professionals are understandably concerned about a young person disclosing or losing confidential records. Use of the MyFILE provides ongoing opportunities for youth to have discussions regarding confidentiality issues, practice maintaining safety and privacy of documents, and rehearse responsible and appropriate disclosure of confidential information -- all with coaching and support from the adults in their life.

Why was MyFILE created?

MyFILE was created to encourage independence for youth with special health needs. MyFILE is designed for youth preparing for transition to adulthood to begin to take responsibility and be engaged in the tracking, handling and organizing of important information about his/her life.

MyFILE was developed through collaboration with families, youth in transition and professionals to address a need for tools to teach self-advocacy and independence.

MyFILE is an adaptation of the Folder of Information of Life Experience (FILE) recordkeeping tool for families that South Dakota Parent Connection has been distributing to families for many years.

Structure of MyFILE

Eighteen separate folders have a suggested list of papers, copies, records that may be kept in each folder. The list may be altered to fit the individual’s life. Three blank folders will assist the user to customize the folders to specific topic areas important to him/her. Most everyone shares common categories, but personal life topics may be different. Each folder contains a business card holder to note and keep track of individuals who have been helpful. Often times, it is more comfortable to deal with the same professional in repeated interactions to establish a relationship. It is important to get in the habit of asking for business cards.

Some tips in developing content for MyFILE

We recognize that youth who use MyFILE may need assistance and support learning self-advocacy and independence. Establishing the habit of putting materials into the MyFILE will take practice. Once routine is established, the ease and accessibility of having MyFILE available will assist the youth to take initiative to add necessary information. As you incorporate the use of MYFILE in your curricula and teaching, it will be a source of reference and assist with self-advocacy.

Begin with one or two folders of current interest and need for youth in your class.

Share personal real-life examples of times you have needed some of the papers or copies listed on the folders. This will help youth plan for life experiences and times when MyFILE will be useful.

Discuss changes in systems and services that youth will face in transition to adulthood. Although youth may not recognize the importance of each item on the checklist right now, the discussion and use of MyFILE will start the thinking process.

Provide the big picture first. This will help youth know the overall purpose of MyFILE. Discussing the reason for keeping certain documents and information may make it easier for youth to identify what they should be looking for, asking for, and keeping.

It is helpful to use the same process for completion of each folder/topic area since this repetition will help the youth to generalize the information and build competency in the use of their record keeping system.

It is important to engage families or others who can support youth to practice using MyFILE—parents, grandparents, foster parents, counselors, and general education teachers—depending on the support a youth may need to reach independence. Practicing will assist youth to understand the personal benefit through experience.

Providing support for the initial use of MyFILE is important. Encourage youth to utilize MyFILE on their own to help develop initiative and independence. Emphasize the importance of adding new information to MyFILE as soon as it is received. This will assist in establishing a pattern or habit that will keep MyFILE current.
Emphasize the importance of taking MyFILE to the doctor, appointments, emergency room/hospital visits, work, school, or other meetings that may require some of the documents and information it holds.
